

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for removing a resist selective to a carbon hard mask including 5 providing an etching plasma comprising of at least hydrogen at a predetermined temperature level and a predetermined pressure level in a reaction chamber, and etching the resist selectively to the mask with said plasma for a predetermined period of time.